

I am opposed to the repeal of Title 2, Net Neutrality. Besides the fact that the internet is a public good (created with taxpayer money by the government), internet service providers cannot be trusted to fairly and reasonably regulate their own industry. If you think the ISPs won't capitalize on such a repeal and then bilk users and companies alike purely for profit motives, then you have no idea what you are doing. Companies like Comcast, Time Warner, Verizon, and others, will use this as an opportunity to increase their profit margins at the expense of consumers and small to medium size businesses, especially those who rely on fair and neutral internet access in order to do their jobs.

In no uncertain terms, repealing Net Neutrality is one of the worst things you can do, at the extreme expense of the citizens of this country.

I implore you to vote "no" on the repeal of Net Neutrality and continue to support a truly free internet (repealing Net Neutrality actually removes freedom).
